Flying jatt video songs download.

While not as impressive as Emirates' Burj Khalifa stunt, I still find this to be really catchy... perhaps too catchy? Emirates' "I Want To Fly The World" video Emirates has just released a song of sorts, called "I Want To Fly The World." Here's how Emirates describes the video: We've been through really challenging times but it can only get better from here. Shake off last year's blues and take back what you've missed. Whether it's experiencing someplace new, or being surrounded by the warmth of what's loved and familiar. I feel like I shouldn't like this song as much as I do, but: The lyrics are really catchy and sort of hilarious — "so I've been working from home, no fun to be had, I just get to be sad, cause I miss my granddad, he's alright though, he's had the vaccine, but he said I'm drinking too much caffeine, know what I mean?" (lol, what?) I love the flight attendants dancing, they are a good vibe (I appreciate how approachable the dancing is — I feel like I could have taken part in this video after a couple of drinks, which is saying a lot) I love just how varied Emirates' marketing is. Sometimes the Dubai-based carrier's ads are serious and are luxury and business focused, while other times the ads are fun, lighthearted, and approachable to all, like this one. I can't help but find it a bit funny that Emirates highlights traveling to Antarctica in this video — the airline flies most places in the world, but it can't get you to Antarctica. Ugh, now I have "I want to fly the world, I want to fly better, take me where the weather's good, when we are together" stuck in my head. I always seem to have some catchy airline song or jingle playing on repeat in my mind. Prior to this it was Alaska Airlines' "safety dance" (I'm not proud to admit it, but I could recite every word in my sleep). Or there's always Turkish Airlines' "globally yours" hold music. It is both the worst hold music of any airline, and also the catchiest. While we're at it, the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) is the only United States government agency to have its own theme song, and it's also really catchy. "We are the people of the FAA..." Emirates' new "I Want To Fly The World" song is extremely catchy, quirky, and fun, and I love it. I guess I now have a new airline song/melody to get stuck in my head... Anyone else like this catchy Emirates song as much as I do? Meet Ben Schlappig, OMAAT Founder The new Harry Potter film hits theaters today, and it got me wondering whether it's possible, using current technology, to make a broomstick fly. I hit the interwebs to find out. Jet engines are too bulky to fit on a broomstick, and probably don't accelerate quite fast enough to zip you off the ground from a standstill. The equipment that operates maglev trains could do the trick, but your travels would be confined to a track. Scientists have used an electrostatic chamber to levitate globs of metal, and an acoustic field to levitate mice, but neither of those options would seem to apply here. One flying broomstick message board I came across suggested manipulating the fourth dimension's magnetic flux, which he called hyperflux, but I don't know how feasible an option that is. The best option I came across was this YouTube video of a kid "flying" his broomstick. Anyone with a tripod and a camera can do this. Just straddle a broomstick, hop, and get your friend to snap a photo while you're midair. Stream all the pictures together and, presto! Flying broomstick. And, judging from this and similar videos on YouTube, mixing in some sweet techno music seems to help the illusion. Got a question? Email it! This e-mail address is being protected from spambots.
